From the Institute for Financial Literacy

2014 Children's Education Program of the Year: Saving & Investing

Banking at School teaches financial management using hands-on techniques between schools, banks and credit unions since 1992. The program gives students the opportunity to open free savings accounts, make weekly deposits and serve as junior tellers. The program is active in more than 80 schools across Delaware for students in grades 1-12. According to their website, "Across the country, studies show that students lack even basic financial knowledge. Most high school graduates lack basic skills in the management of personal finances, according to the Coalition studies; this includes a "lack of insight into the basic principles involved with earning, spending, saving and investing."

Each year, the Institute for Financial Literacy presents the EIFLE Awards at the Annual Conference on Financial Education. EIFLE Awards recognize individuals and organizations that have shown exceptional innovation, dedication and commitment to the field of Financial Education.

The Annual Conference on Financial Education provides professional development opportunities for individuals who work with financial literacy education. The Conference offers attendees the opportunity to learn about current trends, develop funding strategies and advance the cause of financial education.
